

Let's try again, shall we?

FNaF: Last Thing Right (formally, Why is the purple shadow my dad)

im more so explaining the plot than writing out the game script just yet so here you go.

LTR is a FNaF au alternate universe focusing on a new perspective and version of the main villain of the original story: William Afton. Here he is much more different, I wouldn't say better than the original, but I wouldn't say the same. Here, rather than continuing his story of a madman, just right after his first killings he realizes what he has done. He isn't too pleased with himself. He only killed them because he was angry and upset that his children died. That doesn't make it a better reason though. Why did he do that?

His life doesn't get much better, though. His actions had a consequence, that being many things. His co-worker took his own life, after realizing his daughter was really gone, because of William. Julia, the woman he loved so dearly, walked away with their only alive child and didn't turn back, and mostly, the ghosts of the children haunting him, torturing his mind until he passes out every chance they get. He had schizophrenia too, so it didn't help. He had major delusions, hallucinating or hearing ghosts or voices that weren't there, he stopped caring for himself. He deserved everything going to him. He lost everything. But still, he didn't get better. Because he didn't know how to reach out.

Yet still, for some reason, he still worked at a Freddy's location nearby. He didn't know how to stop and leave. He just did. He had coworkers that were decent, and he liked them, Ralph Smith, and Deborah Johnson. They were the only people who did happen to work there, even after the rumors surrounding the place. The murders. he caused. For the months that have passed nothing good has happened. The cycle repeated.

Until this little girl, who snuck it without her parents, or guardians, came into the restaurant. She accidentally bumped into her because she ran into an area she wasn't necessarily allowed in. He helped her go back to the play area. She wasn't a random kid. He had some sort of connection with her that didn't sit right with him. She came in more after that, he soon learned she was an orphan that lived in an orphanage nearby. He felt sad for her. She also had a connection to him, as well. Like he was a safe person to her. Over time, they just clicked. They were like family. William felt like a proper dad. He had to adopt her.

But was he even fit to be a dad again? What did he get himself into? He just sighed and went along. Maybe it could be something he does right in his life. Right. He went through the troubles and adopted her over time. Now she was his child.

But his hallucinations never stopped, he still felt everything torturing him even if he was simply alone. He didn't have a nice family growing up either, he was always alone. He never liked it. He promised himself he'd be a better father than his parents ever were and yet. two of his were dead. and haunting him. He almost prayed that Ashley was someone he could help grow into a decent adult, and he could see he'd live. Happily. A family is all he wanted.

Over time, he realizes that looking back on Ashley's papers, her last name used to be Jones...? he looked back on the murders of the couple years before in a newspaper and. Cassidy Jones. Maybe it was just a common name? He couldn't stop thinking about it. He just knew it was.

A few months later, the place closes down from very little income. Or maybe the fact that mangle chomped down on the newly hired night guard. I guess he had to find a new job to focus on. He needs to stop thinking about Ashley and the fact she's related to a victim of his in some way.

He soon grows distant to Ashley, she gets sad, as any child would. She didn't grow up nice either. Even as a child she had a terrible past. Her mom. her...dad. the wine. the gun. she didn't want him to hate her. She almost started pestering him everyday. He got sick. sick. sick. sick.

Until one day he snapped on her. Getting extremely upset she is pushing on him to talk to her. He yells that she's manipulative towards him and she just. runs out of the out as a scared little deer would. He stops.

That's his child. He needed to help her and he was. yelling. He almost ran after her but. It was no use. Why did he do that?

wait. He prayed to god that she wasn't running to an abandoned Freddy's. he couldn't repeat his daughter, Elizabeth's death. He ran to that specific location, axe in hand. He got in, running, sprinting, to that back room. The animatronics were there. He had to destroy it. so they couldn't get her. so they couldn't harm her.

He started breaking down the animatronics and just. saw the ghosts right in front of him almost laughing at him. for being dumb, stupid to be doing this. He had to fight them somehow, someway. He looked around. the springbonnie suit. That once made him almost better than the kids. He put the axe down and ran to the suit, sloppily putting on the parts and he put it on so wrong it. set off.

blood, painting the walls, his screams of agony. and after a bit. it stopped. he was “dead” for now.

Ashley on the other hand was somewhere in a forest. just thinking about what had happened. Was he ok? She shouldn't have done that. She needed to go back.

She ran home, only to open the door and find no one home. not her dad. She looked and looked but. nothing. She picked up the phone wall and called some people, Ralph and Deborah to be exact, and they tried helping the best they could but they didn't find him.

Ralph offered for her to stay with him for the time being until he was found, or came back somehow. Weeks turned into years. She was going only a little crazy but she was still determined. to somehow find him.

there had been a horror attraction that had opened up nearby. Ashley needed extra money, so she accepted and went to apply. It was easy to get in. She had a coworker that also worked during the night with her named Micheal. They soon learned they were connected somehow after a few nights of boredom. Which micheal moved over here and got this job because he missed his dad, and didn't have his mom anymore, as she passed a few years ago.

Springtrap, or more so William, was now in the building and. somehow, somehow sensed them both. He wasn't all that pretty after a good 15-20 years. rotting and melting but he couldn't do much about it.

One night he inched towards their office and he just. tried talking to them. saying their names just loud enough for them to hear.

They. look at him and they realize who he is. Their father. Ashley immediately goes in and hugs him, Micheal only waving. they have a small reunion and soon enough there was a family again between them, William got fixed up a little by them both and they lived all together.

The ghosts also have now learned. they could torture him all they want but, he loved his family. and that couldn't change. They didn't begin being nice right away but they were a bit less harsh on him. Almost leaving him. except for his two other children, Elizabeth and Dave. Elizabeth used to be one of the worst ghosts, torturing him almost as badly as Cassidy but she just learned that she could be a family with them too. maybe if she was able to possess something to communicate with the other two.

Over time this built on, Ashley soon adopted a son, Micheal got married and had a few pets, they all just lived happily.

One sunny morning a knock was heard on Ashley's front door, she went to open it and saw a lady, about 50 and just shook Ashley's hand

The lady was William's sister and she had been wanting to get a hold on him ever since the success of Freddy's, and she now knew he was a robot rabbit that took care of his grandson, and she just hugged him, and he hugged her back.

Penny, his sister was now also welcome into the family, as they all stayed connected and sometimes had dinner together, catching up on everything

William got the help he needed, Ralph still hung around and most importantly that was everything William wished for.

Not everything ended up perfect, in the way William had expected it but it was his life. Not everything was gonna be perfect.

What, did you think it would end the story with some nasty twist? No, I'm not a monster! Anyway, this is just the main plot. Game script won't be shown to the public. feel free to ask more!