

Name Here
Blog Name Here
Terms and Conditions

I. Introduction

I've been blogging for over one year and have had many instances that make me very wary of accepting books from authors. This contract is not only because of my experience, but of other bloggers that have been having a hard time as well. The agreement has been created so we have an understanding of what's going to happen when I review the book, and how you can help the process run smoothly.

II. This will be my review

If I review your book, that means it will be in my own words. You will not tell me what to add or take out or saying that my view is wrong. If you put the book in my hands you give me full rights to say what I want about it.

III. If the review is not flattering

I read books that are good, and some that are not so good. If I give your book under three stars, I will contact you to see if you still want it posted. Not many bloggers do this... it's always "Too bad so sad". I want you to succeed, so if you don't think my review is flattering, I won't post it. This also reverts to rule one. I will not change my review because it's not flattering. Keep in mind that not everyone will love your book, even Lord of the Rings or Harry Potter -- which are loved by many people -- have gotten criticism. You're no different.

IV. Other social media sites

I will post these reviews on my blog, Amazon, and Goodreads. If you have another place you want me to post or don't want Amazon or Goodreads, please tell me. I will not under any circumstances harass any fellow bloggers on these sites for you.

V. I will not keep your book

Once I'm finished reading your book, I will not store it in my overflowing bookshelf. Instead I'll be giving them away on my blog. This is actually a good thing. If I hold a giveaway with your book as a prize it will help your promoting, not damage it. Doesn't matter what book format you give me, it will not sit on my shelf and get dusty.

VI. Act like an adult

Yes, this has to be said. If you don't like something I've said in my review or don't like a certain aspect of how I post them, no name calling, swearing at me, or threats of any kind. I have seriously gotten these, and I'm sick of it. You're a professional... don't think my review is going to damage your sales immensely.

VII. Conclusion

I'm a really nice reviewer and am not out to get you. My goal is to help you succeed, and if you think you're a good fit contact me back with a big "Yes!" and I'll get started right away. If you don't agree with any of these terms, I'm sorry to see you leave and I hope you'll think of me in the future. Again, this is typed out because of my past, not because I personally think you're out to get me. We both have a passion for books, and I'd love to review for you!

Thank you,

Name Here