

Date or befriend?

As described in The Guardian and The New York Times

Feel free (encouraged even!) to share!

tl;dr

Age: 48

Location: London, for now

Wants kids?: Yes

Height: 5 ft 9 and three-quarters 🤪

About me

- Raised by dogs. Single, no kids yet, looking for the same: happy, healthy, smart, kind, playful, curious (spiritually too :) grounded, EQ IQ.. Message me!
- Collector of experiences. I enjoy expanding my comfort zone and trying out new things.
- Happy host. Dreaming of having a party on the moon..
- Mix of intra and extraverted
- Largely green values, left-ish
- Veggie most of the time
- I care about my/our impact on the world and want to do all that I can to help. I am a community builder, I like to help people who help people. I cofounded WeavingLab.org, work at TransformationsCommunity.org and SystemicInnovation.work
- My attachment style is fairly secure
- Pretty healthy, active, lucky, grateful
- Non-ordinary, I am a little bit of a rebel
- Teeth, stunts and opinions all my own (if you believe in free will..!)

Things I do/like

🤪 Learning about myself, us, the world. I think curiosity is a superpower (although the flip side can be Shiny Penny Syndrome). Currently looking for a buddy for: improv, permaculture, dancing, tantra, harmonica, shamanism, how to be bored 🎵 What do you want to learn next?

🗨️ Exploring exciting things with interesting people. I started a social group for people interested in systems change in London. Hope you might like to join!

🎵 Live music. Festivals once a month in summer, clubbing once or twice a year, gigs as much as possible

🏞️ Hike in nature. I love creatures & I do pet-sitting on the side

📖 Read graphic novels and non-fiction

- 🍌 Watching sport of almost any variety
- 🏃 Exercise 2-3 times a week (gym, occasional classes yoga & whatnot)
- 🍷 Love a good paradox, with a whisky
- ❤️ Love hanging out with my 6-year-old niece
- 😄 Like my own jokes

Life ideas:

- I would like to have 1-3 kids (ideally at least 1 my own and within next 3 years..)
- I am thinking to move out of London somewhere closer to nature / with interesting open-minded progressive people / with more communal spirit to raise a family (either within or outside of UK, maybe Bristol or Brighton). Or, find somewhere green in London (live in a park?!) and get involved with the community.
- Open to 6 months here, 6 months there, I can work anywhere. But I am keen to deepen roots in place and in community.

Review from a blind date (also in The Guardian - I do read other newspapers, honest!):

First impressions? Friendly, open, attractive, smiley.

Best thing about Nick? So easy to talk to and a lovely very genuine guy. A breath of fresh air.

Would you introduce Nick to your friends? Absolutely. There's nothing not to like.

Describe Nick in three words. Considerate, smart, easy going

About you

We would have a better chance if you were

- The real deal! 🍀
- Brains + kindness I find very sexy.
- Someone curious, healthy, fun.
- Emotionally available, mostly securely attached
- Family-orientated
- Willing and able to meet in person
- Open to having child(ren) in the next few years. A loving fun relationship comes first, absolutely ❤️

What next?

If you like what you read, you could reach out (via

<https://www.linkedin.com/in/nickgraham77/> or <https://www.instagram.com/gratefulape/>

perhaps) and we can meet up for drink/walk/etc :)

Besties bro and niece

Amsterdam, my fav city

One of many besties scattered around the world

Trek to the Lost City

Photo bombing

Dogs, kids and playful people (on the other side of the camera here) bring out the play in me. How bout you?

Wedding crashing

I care less about football these days but live sport / music / experiences are always welcome