

FLWG (Faculty Libraries Working Group)

Dear Friends,

Our petition is now closed, after over 1,040 signatures!

We are incredibly grateful for the support of so many students, undergraduate and graduate, faculty, staff, alumnae and alumni and friends from our community. This support has not just come from the humanities, the arts and the social sciences, but from many departments in the sciences and in technology and engineering, as well as the professional schools and library administration staff.

Where are we now? Thanks to the University Committee and especially the University Libraries Committee we have regained significant control of the planning and implementation process of the Libraries Master Plan. We have good reason to believe that the Kohler and Memorial open-stack collections will be protected. More work needs to be done, and we all have to continue to be involved. The petition was an important means to express the urgency of the problem, to demonstrate the significance of the Kohler and Memorial library collections to our scholarly community, and our faith in the decision-making process. It featured as well in the successful panel discussion and public forum held on March 16 at the Elvehjem Building and sponsored by the Institute for Research in the Humanities.

Again, thank you to all, and we will continue to be involved and vigilant! The IRH website will report on developments and decisions concerning the libraries. You may continue to send comments or inquiries to:

FLWGpetition@gmail.com.

Although the petition is now closed, you may still view the original statement and signatures on the following pages.

Original Petition

To the University of Wisconsin-Madison:

We, the undersigned graduate students, faculty and staff in support of research in the arts, the humanities, and the social sciences, protest the planned destruction of a portion of the open-stack standing collections in the Memorial Library and the Kohler Art Library.

These collections are part of a unique historical quadrangle devoted to the arts, humanities, and social sciences on our campus; this space should be at the center of any UW-Madison advancement and capital campaign and it is an invaluable national and international recruitment tool. We owe present and future generations of students, faculty and staff stewardship of our print collections.

The open-stack standing collection of books and journals in the Memorial Library and the Kohler Art Library is essential to our teaching and research for the following reasons:

- all research in the humanities and most research in the arts and the social sciences relies to a great extent on print materials - both scholarly works and primary creative works - collected over generations;
- the relevance of print collections to research is not predictable, that is, the latest editions are not necessarily the most valuable ones, and the most recent material does not automatically supersede older material;
- electronic materials, whether scanned from print or born-digital, form a part of our research, but cannot replace research that often requires working with many print materials simultaneously, with cross-checking and comparison of editions, moving from primary to secondary material, etc.;
- electronic resources are more vulnerable to disappearance or alteration than printed resources, and their formats and forms of access change rapidly;
- the quality of electronic resources varies greatly; many items are barely legible, have interfaces that cannot be relied upon for serious research and teaching, or do not convey the richness of the physical artifact;
- creative scholarship often arises out of serendipitous discoveries and connections: indeed, truly innovative work in our fields supposes an ability to "browse," to work freely in a physical space with abundant and direct access to print materials;
- faculty in the arts, humanities and social sciences often require students to check out books and journals for use in classes and in their research projects. It has been demonstrated that learning with traditional note-taking and printed material is more in-depth and longer-lasting than learning with electronic materials only.

The disadvantages involved in removing easy access to print materials are far greater than the advantages. Disadvantages include increased time needed for research in the humanities, arts and social sciences, and decreased quality of education and research.

A plan that eliminates or renders far more onerous a proven method of teaching and research, and fails to demonstrate beyond any doubt that our teaching and scholarship would be enhanced by this elimination, should not go forward.

We therefore urge the university administration to preserve the open-stack standing collections of the Memorial and the Kohler Art libraries.
