History

Early Life

Wormwort was a former outsider before coming to the colony she currently resides in. Her early life was spent with her parents and herself. She used to live farther, her home made in a hill that is perched in a forest. Wormwort loved playing in the stream nearby their den, and loved running through flowers. She didn't grow up with any siblings, so she learned to have fun by herself. She got into trouble here and there with her parents, but overall had a good early life. She and her parents have a good relationship. She left her parents at 12 months of age to be a traveling loner.

Traveling Period

Wormwort traveled far from her home through many forests, plains, and occasionally dabbled in foothills, but never really climbed mountains. She's encountered other loners every once in a while, but she always avoided them in case of hostility. She enjoys swimming in streams and rivers, but is always careful when the current is strong. She has gotten into a few incidents, encountering hostile loners, most of which she ran away from, or got pulled away by a strong river. Wormwort has since learned to sharpen her skills by herself. She enjoys climbing trees when she can to look out at the world below, a better way to view the terrain in her eyes. She feels a strong connection to nature. Upon her journeys, she learned of Colony territories. She liked the concept of being organized and structured in groups and also being present in nature. She took interest in Ivy Colony for its beautiful territory and density of vegetation.
