TRAINING / SKILLS

be thoughtful about your positionality within the communities who need non-carceral harm prevention most. if you are not directly impacted or marginalized, consider how you can make these trainings available to people who are (either instead of you or alongside you).

before attending a training ask about the organization's principles when it comes to anti-oppression. look for values that resemble transformative justice's values. avoid white practitioners who have no explicit racial justice and anti-oppressive framework on their website.

it's likely you'll have to travel for training; ask about scholarships. i got together with 5 community members and we raised collective money for our community to send folks of color and trans folks to be trained who otherwise wouldn't have access.
