Global context + Global context exploration	Who are we as people in the larger context of the economy? How we view our role in the economy can have an impact on our economic freedom and economic equity.	Who are we as people in the larger context of the economy? How we view our economy can have an impact on our economic freedom and economic equity.	What is the nature of the relationship between consumers and producers? Our belief in equity helps us imagine a system that works equally for buyers and sellers.	Do we have a duty to provide for those who seek equity in our economic system? We believe that every person should have equal access in our economy.	How are cultures connected through trade? Our understanding of specialization allows us to become aware of our interdependence.	Are we fully aware of the latest technology and systems that affect our personal finances? We understand that technology has wonderful benefits and risky unintended consequences.
Statement of Inquiry <small>Note: must include the Global Context Exploration, Key Concepts &amp; Related Concepts</small>	A person's place in the economy is largely determined by the economic system the person lives in.	A person's place in the economy is largely determined by the economic system the person lives in.	A free-market economy should create opportunity for a wide range of individuals and it that opportunity should be sustainable and progressive .	The US Economy should not favor the most privileged at the expense of the most vulnerable ; we should not privatize the gains and socialize the losses .	Trade among nations should be fair and without barriers and should take into consideration the global issues we face such as climate .	A person's personal financial health is influenced by constantly changing technological innovations such as virtual currency .
Current Event or Real Life Connection	We live in a mixed economy that features privatization as well as government intervention.	We live in a mixed economy that features privatization as well as government intervention.	Recent developments such as the COVID-19 pandemic have shown how important for our system to check local institutions from practices such as price	Even after reform, there are still leaders of banks and giant corporations who take home millions in bonuses and taxpayers are constantly asked to bail out their institutions.	Climate change is having very negative effects on our natural world and establishing fair and equitable trade among nations large and small is going to be vital for the future.	Inflation is crippling many American households, so it is important to use as many tools available to ensure the health of your personal and family economy.
