

If you're writing a research paper but have to approach a topic from multiple disciplines, you can use the discipline filter in Summon to find articles across various subjects. Here's how!

Start at the libraries' homepage and select the Articles tab. This is where we can search our topic across all of the libraries' various databases. Type in your search terms here and click search.

Here I see thousands of results on football concussions. A lot of them seem to focus on the medical aspects of concussions, which is great! But I need to find this topic in another discipline as well. An easy way to do that is by looking at the sidebar on the left. There's a filter labeled discipline where I can select a different discipline as a filter.

I'm going to select education. Now I have information on football concussions from an education perspective.

If you click on preview underneath an article you like, you can look in the subject area to find additional search terms you might want to use.

If you have questions or find yourself getting stuck, ask a librarian!
