Update on Katerina Estefania's Progress

Katerina had a series of seizures in April, although she was taking all of her meds on time. It had been several since anything like this had happened, so her mother took her to the neurologist. He did several tests, and he added a new medicine to her regimen for three weeks to help her. They were able to get her stabilized, but these months were so difficult for Katerina that she felt like she wanted to die. Her mother missed a lot of work and worried that she would lose her job, but she was more concerned about Katerina's health. Her doctor recommended that she alleviate stress from her life, but this was during the time when she was working to complete all of the requirements for her graduation. She did graduate, and now, she is much calmer, and her health has remained stable.

Fortunately, her mother didn't lose her job, and everything is much better for them, now. They are appreciative of your support and the great impact it has had on Katerina's life. Thank you so much, and God bless you!
