- Zero Conditional
  - Functions
    - Used to express laws and rules.
      - If you commit a crime, you go to jail.
    - Used to express things that are always true.
      - If I eat peanuts, I have an allergic reaction.
  - Structure
    - Regular
      - "If/When" Clause + "Main" Clause
        - "If/When" Clause
          - "If/When" + Subject + Present Simple Form + A comma (,)
            - If it rains,
        - "Main" Clause
          - Subject + Present Simple Form
            - We get wet.
      - If it rains, we get wet.
    - Question
      - Follow the same structure for the "If/When" Clause and make the "Main" Clause a question.
        - If it rains, does the ground get wet?
        - If we go to the beach, do we buy ice cream?
    - Negative
      - Make each clause negative when appropriate. The important thing is it makes sense.
        - If you don't drink water, you die.
        - If I drink coffee before bed, I don't sleep.
    - Inversion
      - The clauses can be inverted and still carry the same meaning. This is done by switching the "If/When" Clause and the "Main" Clause and getting rid of the comma.
        - If I drink, I don't drive.
          - I don't drive if I drink.
