The One57 (Actual Location)

Formally named Carnegie 57 and monikered "The Billionaire Building" the One57 was once one of the most sought after pieces of real estate before the building and the hotel were purchased in its entirety by Texan billionaire Blake Warner.

The seventy-five story skyscraper is located at 157 West 57th street in midtown Manhattan. The building has 92 condominium units built atop a 210 room luxury hotel and casino that occupies the first 39 floors of the building with the living quarters attesting to the rest of the space.

It was perfect for the Silver Fang tribe. The hotel itself was a never-depleting source of revenue; moreover, architecture of the building was designed so that One57 residents would have their own separate entrance with a lobby and elevator bank, so they didn't have to mingle with the guests at Park Hyatt on the lower floors ensuring that higher rage Garou could come and go without attracting undue attention.

The building was quite a gem, with every room affording magnificent views of the city with floor to ceiling windows and The penthouses boast a breathtaking view of Central Park. The living quarters are from one to six bedrooms, and are perfect for housing Silver Fang families and their packs.

For the tribal residents of the building, Silver Fang kinfolk provide in room spa services, a concierge, in room dining, and pet-care services including walking. Aside from the hotel amenities, the residents of the One 57 also have their own 20,000-square-foot amenities floor, complete with a pool, gym, library, and theater.

There are whispers of a large library in the home of the Sept Elder. It is rumored that a hidden study behind one of the bookcases houses a vault dedicated to the genealogies and family bloodlines of Falcon's brood along with rare relics and fetishes belonging to the Nation.
