

To integrate digital measurement technologies at scale in clinical research, pharma and technology communities must unite to drive the adoption of shared standards suitable for clinical research.

We are proud to announce that the following individuals already share this vision and are committed to next steps:

- Lauren Bataille, Director, Digital Strategy Lead, Clinical Trial Innovation; Novartis
- Peter Bergethon, Scientific Leadership Board, DiMe
- Kai Bode, Director, Digital and Analytics Technologies; Merck
- Andy Coravos, CEO; Elektra Labs
- Michelle Croumenthal, Managing Director, Digital Health Strategy & Implementation; AbbVie
- Shoibal Datta, Head of Digital Strategy; Takeda
- Deborah Estrin, Co-founder at Open mHealth; Professor of Computer Science and Associate Dean, Cornell Tech
- Luca Foschini, Chief Data Scientist; Evidation Health
- Anne Heatherington, SVP, Head of Data Sciences Institute; Takeda
- Michael Kirwan, Principal; Blue Connect Global
- Sean Khozin, Global Head of Data Strategy; Janssen R&D, Johnson & Johnson Research Affiliate
- Wayne Kubick, CTO; HL7
- Lara Mangravite, President; Sage Bionetworks
- Quentin Le Masne, Head of Product Development, Drug Delivery Devices & Connected Healthcare; EMD Serono
- Maria Palombini, Healthcare Life Sciences Practice; IEEE Standards Association
- Ida Sim, Co-founder at Open mHealth; Professor of Medicine at UCSF; and Co-Director, Informatics & Research Innovation, UCSF Clinical and Translational Sciences Institute
- Diane Stephenson, Executive Director; Critical Path for Parkinson's
- Paul Upham, Head, Smart Devices; Roche / Genentech

The Harvard-MIT Center for Regulatory Science is an institutional supporter of this vision, sharing the Digital Medicine Society's commitment to advancing the use of digital technologies to improve health research through the development and broad adoption of common standards.

Do you share this same commitment to advancing the use of digital technologies in clinical trials and vision for collaborative action? Declare your interest and participate in next steps by signing up.