Making Predictions

Great readers continually make predictions about the texts they are reading. They use clues from pictures and the text. Good readers also use their own experiences to help them make predictions.

Directions: Use clues and your own experiences to predict what you think this novel is about. What actions will take place? What will be the overall themes? What will the characters be like?

My Prediction:

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

What specific evidence from the front cover or the back cover blurb did you use to make these predictions?

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____

_____