

I plan to connect people together. My vision is to create a strong and participatory community. The big vision is to politically shift the sense of community within academia, and to do so incorporate art as a medium to some of the interactions. As this is my work, to me connecting is life; so the more I feel connected the more alive I become. My vision goes hand in hand with open science practices, it revolves around the open science community Rotterdam, and it can be applied further on with collaborations worldwide with other open science communities. In my opinion, my vision will provide an opportunity to people to see and explore the open science practices/core values and I hope that after 'seeing' that they cannot 'unsee' it anymore. I believe in the power of the group/community as being the most powerful/ Bringing community in academia together through art.
