Arab Israeli Conflict: Briefing Papers

Introduction: Sound educational decision-making requires well-informed, well-advised decision makers. Yet, no decision maker has the time or resources to thoroughly research every issue confronting them. Briefing papers are one means of providing these decision makers concise information on a topic. Briefing papers update readers on an issue's current status and get readers up-to-speed on the background of an issue. You will write a briefing for each chapter of the book. You will stop halfway through chapter four, The Search for a Settlement, page 125.
