My Turkish journey

On Monday morning, we were excited to meet the other students for the first time. Immediately after the meeting, we split into two groups. One group consisted of teachers and the other consisted of students. This makes it easier to communicate and build relationships. After introducing ourselves and having some conversation, we went to the school, where we saw a folkdance presentation. Then we went up to the room where we spent the most time at school. The first interactive program began here, as everyone could try their hand at painting. Unfortunately, I could not paint, but I did not look at it with my crossed arms. The Turkish students gave me a tour of the school and I got to know several people. They told me about themselves and offered me local Turkish sweets. It was one of the most enjoyable parts of the whole week. The picture was taken after all the conversations, when I was already a little exhausted. Unfortunately, after a few hours, we had to leave. We spent the rest of the day watching a museum, mosque and city, as well as lots of conversations. The program ended at 5:00 a.m., after which we could take a look around the city.

We started the second day with the performances, which everyone waited for nervously but with some excitement. The first lecture was given by Turkish students. You could see that they were very serious prepared. Then we came, the Hungarian group. The picture gives us a little insight into our presentation. After us lined up the groups of other countries. After the presentations, everyone was relieved to enjoy the other programs. In the afternoon we went to a beautiful ancient city, where we had the opportunity to walk. During this time, we could see Aydin. Later, we coloured our day with a joint lunch, visiting a museum and making handicraft soaps.

The third day was not interesting to me. We went to a university where we listened to lectures. The teachers really enjoyed it, but it did not sustain interest for us students. But I really liked that part of it when we were involved in the work. The picture captured one of these tasks. We also had free time with the other students. explored the beautiful areas of the university.

We

The fourth day was the most busy and the most exciting. We went to Kusadasi, where we were given two hours of free time. This time could be used very well to get to know the others better. I spent this time with the Portuguese, coloured by some swimming. Then we went to Ephesus, which was my favorite program. It has always been my dream to go to Greece. In Ephesus, I felt like I was there, and that's why I enjoyed it so much. The nature around him was admirable. During the sightseeing tour, thanks to our very good guide, we learned a lot of interesting things. After a thorough tour of the ancient city, we went to Sirince. We had another free time here.

We spent our last day together on Friday, which ended with a beautiful breakfast. By recalling our shared experiences and eating well-wishers, with a heavy heart, we said goodbye to each other.

Some pictures of the trip:

The Hungarian group in the company of two Turkish teachers

With my Portuguese friends

The Hungarian team

Participants in the Erasmus programme