Dear Representative _____:

For too long, fossil fuel executives and the politicians they bankroll have actively sowed doubt among the public about climate change to protect their power and profits. All the while, Indigenous peoples, communities of color, and low-income families around the world suffer the worst impacts of pollution and the climate crisis.

Scientific experts have sounded a clear alarm: our window for action to prevent catastrophic climate change is quickly closing. That's why we're calling on elected leaders like you to fight for the bold, just climate solutions we need — before our communities and the planet run out of time.

We need bold solutions to protect communities on the frontlines of the climate crisis — not big polluters' profits. We need real climate leadership. We need a Green New Deal.

A Green New Deal is not a single policy intervention. It is a just and equitable multi-pronged policy approach to transform our economy and energy system and help build sustainable and resilient communities. While there remains space for debate on the policies that will make up a Green New Deal, we ask that you support legislation that includes the following:

- Halt all new fossil fuel extraction, infrastructure, and subsidies, and transition power generation to 100% renewable energy by 2035 or sooner.
- Rapidly decarbonize the agriculture and transportation sectors, and expand access to public transportation.
- Ensure a Fair & Just Transition led by impacted workers and communities, including low income and communities of color, without relying on corporate schemes or market-based mechanisms.
- Uphold Indigenous Rights.
- Pass a national jobs guarantee, creating good jobs with collective bargaining and family-sustaining wages.

This bold, just, and necessary vision for a Green New Deal has broad support from more than 600 progressive organizations, over 45 members of Congress, and 80% of American voters.

Across the country this week, a coalition of many of those progressive organizations — including 350.org, Center for Biological Diversity, Climate Hawks Vote, Food & Water Watch, Friends of the Earth U.S., Greenpeace, Oil Change USA, and Public Citizen — and thousands of activists are taking action to deliver hundreds of thousands of messages from Americans of all walks of life calling on representatives like you to support a Green New Deal in line with what science and justice demand.

Can we count on you?
