Abstract

Abstract set a maximum of 250 words, including keywords and article classification. The following points should always be featured:

Research Objective– is an essential part of a study that clearly explains what the researcher aims to achieve through the research. This objective provides focus and direction for the entire research process and is usually formulated based on the problem or research gap identified earlier.

Methodology– is a section of the research that describes how the study was conducted. It includes the steps, techniques, and procedures used to collect, analyze, and interpret data. This explanation provides clarity to readers about the approach taken and ensures that the research can be replicated or validated by others.

Findings– is a part of the research report that presents the main results obtained from data analysis. This section serves to answer the research questions or achieve the objectives set out in the study. Findings should be presented clearly, systematically, and concisely, without excessive interpretation or in-depth discussion (which is typically covered in the Discussion section).

Research Implications/Limitations– provides an explanation of the impact and limitations of the research. This section helps readers understand the relevance of the study, its application in real-world contexts, and the constraints affecting the generalizability or validity of the research results.

Originality/Value– explains what makes the research unique and significant. Researchers need to demonstrate how their study contributes new insights or adds valuable perspectives to the relevant field of study. This could involve new perspectives, innovative approaches, current data, or solutions to specific problems.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION
Findings (can be in form of subheading) (1500-2500 words)

Inform a number of important data (original) fields which are obtained from the questionnaires, surveys, documents, interviews, observations and other data collection techniques. It can be completed with a table or graphic to clarify the result.

Presenting the data that has been interpreted and analyzed by a specific technique and has been processed by the specific theory (also from researcher ideas). Your discussion is the most anticipated part of the journal because you will discuss and elaborate on previous research and theory so that your research has implications and recommendations for future research.

CONCLUSION

Write succinctly and clearly the result of research then describe the logical consequence in developing science and praxis of Islamic education. (Conclusion is not indented and uses bolded Garamond 12).
