

Things I wish I could say (to my chem teacher)

A mini rant

I know that the only thing you learned in college was to ask a question and stare at us expectantly so someone gets uncomfortable enough to answer. But we don't know the answer or we just don't feel like answering. If we're not raising our hands, it probably means we don't know the answer. For God's sake, call on the people jumping out of their seat. Not me. It's Monday morning, therefore, illegal to give us pop quizzes. I've never met someone so insensitive. Stop playing the devil's advocate whenever someone's wrong. It's annoying. And not everyone has a Master's in chem, so quit acting like I'm stupid whenever I ask a question. I don't appreciate your attitude. I don't care about balancing equations, ions, or oxidation numbers. I just need this class to graduate.
