Part 3 Information Transfer

Read the text and answer the questions. Your answers should not be more than three words.

The earth is losing its forests. Presently, trees cover about 30 percent of the earth's surface, but they are being destroyed at an alarming rate, especially in the tropics. Timber harvesting is a major reason for the destruction of the forests. Trees are used for building houses, making furniture, and providing pulp for paper products, such as newspapers and magazines. At least 40 hectares of rainforest are being felled every minute, mostly in order to extract the valuable timber.

It was more like swimming in a pool rather than the deep ocean waters in Kauai, Hawaii. The waves were small and inconsistent, and I was just rolling along with them, relaxing on my surfboard with my left arm dangling in the cool water. I remember thinking, I hope the surf picks up soon, when suddenly there was a flash of grey.

That was all it took: a split second. I felt a sudden great pressure and a couple of fast tugs. I saw the jaws of a four-and-a-half-meter tiger shark cover the top of my board and my left arm. Then I watched in shock as the water around me turned bright red. My left arm was gone almost to the armpit, along with a huge, crescent-shaped chunk of my red, white and blue surfboard.

Lying on my surfboard, watching my blood spread in the water around me, I said to my friends nearby, in a loud, yet calm voice, "I've just got attacked by a shark."

Byron and Holt got to me in a flash. Holt's face was white, and his eyes were wide with shock. But, he took control of the situation: he pushed me by the tail of my board, and I caught a small wave that washed me over the reef. Fortunately, it was high tide. If it had been low tide, we would have had to go all the way around the reef to get to shore. As it was, the beach was still about 400 meters away.

My arm was bleeding badly, but not spewing blood like it should with a major artery open. I know now that wounds like mine often cause the arteries to roll back and tighten. I was praying like crazy: "Please, God, help me. Let me get to the beach," over and over again.
