Questions 34 to 37 refer to the following text.

In my opinion children should be educated at home. There are many arguments why I think so.

Firstly, technology has improved so much today that the children can learn everything at home using computers through the internet. So, the government would save a lot of money to build schools and to pay teachers. The money can be used to pay for more important things such as medical research, hospital upgrading and food for homeless.

Secondly, there would be no bullying. Some students are upset by bullying at school that they experience learning difficulties. They can not concentrate as they are worried about what the bullies will do to them. When they study at home they will feel peaceful and quiet so they can learn a lot more.

Thirdly, children would be safer when they do not have to travel to school. Both parents and children would no longer have fear of traffic accident on the way to school or on the way home.

From the reason above, it is obvious that children can be educated at home and they do not need to go to school

34. What does the text mainly talk about?
 - A. How to get education at home.

This text is for questions 46 and 47.

Flat glass is used in windows because it is strong, clear, and weatherproof. In the past, making flat glass was time-consuming and costly, but now it can be made cheaply and easily due to the float glass method. This multi-phase method was discovered in 1959 by a British company called Pilkington.

In the first phase, glass ingredients are put into a melting furnace. This produces molten glass. Next, the molten glass is gently poured into a tank of molten tin. This tank is called a float bath because a layer of molten glass floats on the surface of the molten tin. Molten tin is used in the float bath because it has a smooth, mirror-like surface. The molten glass can be made thicker or thinner by controlling how fast it flows through the float bath.

The flat layer of glass is then moved along rollers and cooled very slowly in a low tunnel called lehr. In the next phase, the glass is washed and then cut into sheets using diamond wheels cutters. Finally, the sheets of glass are stacked together and taken to the warehouse.

Management of trash is very important in Indonesia. As one of the countries with big amount of trash from many factors, proper management is necessary.

Firstly, it is important to provide healthy environment. When the trash is not managed well, it will create area where bacteria can live.

Moreover, it can cause some health issues, and breathing issues become one of them that can be caused by bad smell of the trash.

Furthermore, bad management of trash can lead to flood. When it is not managed well, trash can block the flow of water. As the result, water debit can increase during the rainy season and the channels of water can not deliver the water well.

That is why it is very important to manage the trash and it is better to promote the recycling process.
