

Halley Brisker

A Los Angeles native, Halley Brisker up and moved with his family to London at 9 years old. At 16 Halley embarked on a career in hairdressing after leaving school and immediately took up position in a number of top London hair salons at the time, learning his craft on the job. It was here that whilst still honing his craft he was presented with an opportunity to help on a photoshoot for a top magazine. An immersive experience, pulling back the curtain on a whole different world, Halley decided to go head first into publication, film, music video and fashion work. Halley spent the next 6 years training under some of the worlds leading hairstylists before embarking on an international career of his own. Halley is currently an Olaplex ambassador and regularly works on renowned covers for international publications such as Vogue, Elle, Cosmopolitan and many others. He now also devotes much of his time to his working relationship with Hollywood actors and their projects around the world.
