The Underrated Small-Cap Stocks newsletter provides investors with insights into what underfollowed hedge funds are investing in to crush the market - all without having to pay absurd investment management costs.

First - Piggybacking billionaire investors just isn't a viable way to find stock ideas these days. One area of the market that's not overcrowded and consistently outperforming the market is small and mid-cap stocks. But with full-time jobs, kids, and happy hours, who really has time to sort through the thousands of small-cap stocks out there?

Now - there's already a number of newsletters out there trying to sell you billionaire investor stock picks, but you can find Warren Buffett, Carl Icahn and Bill Ackman stock picks for free on the SEC website.

Rather - investors should be more interested in small cap stocks that are in the portfolios of full time - successful - hedge funds that aren't being covered on CNBC.

Funds like this do exist and they are consistently generating market-beating returns. The Underrated Small-Cap Stocks newsletter is dedicated to identifying value small and mid-cap stocks in the portfolios of small and underfollowed hedge funds, with the promise of generating outsized returns.

Instead of telling you what Carl Icahn is buying, we're here to tell you about the unknown hedge funds, one of which has posted an annualized return of 22% since inception in 2006 - compared to the meager 7% annualized return for the S&P 500.

What's included with each edition?

- Two thorough interview with two fund managers, so you can understand their history, strategy, investing style, how they find ideas, position sizing, past winners, portfolio concentration and top holdings.
- We also do a deep dive into the fund's best ideas, which includes why the opportunity exists and key catalysts.

The Underrated Small-Cap Stocks newsletter is not right for everyone. If you are a trader, or someone looking for a 'quick buck' or 'the next big thing', don't join the Underrated Small-Cap Stocks newsletter.

If you are looking for stock picks you won't find on other websites or newsletters, and want under the radar stocks vetted by low-profile managers, then the Underrated Small-Cap Stocks newsletter is right for you.
