

History

Daughter of an elf and a demon, Eladra Dayglow (sometimes taking the surname Hellstar or a variant thereof) has lived the life of a wanderer ever since her sixteenth year. Raised by her mother but unaccepted by other Elves, she left to find purpose. Late in her eighteenth year she encountered a priest of Morne and, seeing in his desire to carry the burdens of others a way to distract her own wandering, lustful mind and body gladly joined the clergy. From that day forth she has dedicated herself to a life of self-denial and service to the struggling and downtrodden of Aethyr.

Personality

Eladra is naturally charming as most of her Felstari brethren are but finds herself uncomfortable in protracted social situations, especially with strangers. She is however implacably stubborn, partially by nature and partially by necessity born of discrimination. She's managed to maintain a generally kind and outgoing personality, but is prone to bouts of melancholy. Enjoys solitary prayer and meditation, even in dangerous locations.