

Reading Citations

Using the scholarly source (journal article, book, or book chapter) you brought to class, complete the following exercise:

1. Write down the citation information for the source in the space provided below.
2. Use the source's bibliography or footnotes to identify 2 additional sources that might be useful for your research.

→ Write the first source's citation information here:

Do we have the source at Georgetown? How could you get access?

→ Write the second source's citation information here:

Do we have the source at Georgetown? How could you get access?

3. Search for your source in Google Scholar (scholar.google.com). How many times has the source been cited? Are any of those sources relevant to your research?

Can't find what you're looking for? Visit the Interlibrary and Consortium Loans page to find out how to request materials from other libraries (www.library.georgetown.edu/loans).
