Departure	1. Status Quo 2. Call to Adventure 3. Assistance 4. Departure	The hobbit Frodo Baggins lives in the Shire, a peace-loving area of Middle-earth characterized by leisure. Gandalf, an old friend and mentor, determines (after a series of events) that Frodo must carry the ring to Elrond. Reluctant to accept the adventure, he decides to confide in his close friend, Sam. Gandalf, in addition, counsels Frodo and he finally decides to accept the quest. This acceptance is made visible by Sam and Frodo toward the beginning of the first film. Sam even states that it's the furthest he's been from home, which can be assumed about Frodo as well. Video link to Frodo leaving the Shire
Initiation	5. Trials 6. Approach 7. Crisis 8. Treasure 9. Result	Throughout the course of the 3 movie series, Frodo encounters dozens of different enemies of many different forms (orc, human, hobbit). He has to carry the weight of the ring, which represents the evil of their world (Middle-earth). Frodo experiences a crisis just before the ring is destroyed where the evil, for a moment, overcomes the resilient hobbit. Golem, subsequently, fights for the ring with Frodo. Golem wins the fight but is consumed by the volcano along with the ring. The ring is finally destroyed and Frodo is relieved of that burden. Video link for Frodo experiencing the crisis
Return	10. Return 11. New Life 12. Resolution	Frodo awakens in Rivendell, which could symbolize his awakening/rebirth/return. He reunited with his hobbit friends and Gandalf, the original mentor. He returns home to find his friends and home almost exactly as he left them. However, he is unable to enjoy the simple pleasures of the shire after experiencing the evils of the one ring. He decides he is unable to adjust to his old life and boards a ship to the undying lands. Video link for Frodo back at the Shire
