<http://eca.state.gov/video/moocs-engage-bolivian-youth-business-strategy> Public Diplomacy Officer Yuki Kondo-Shah and Bolivian Fulbright Alumna Monica Flores led a class using new technologies, like Google Plus Hangouts, to introduce Silicon Valley entrepreneurs to a group of undergraduate business students in Bolivia. These weekly classes were part of the second Massive Open Online Classes, or MOOC pilot program organized by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs and facilitate by State Alumni. La Paz was one of 36 posts around the world using MOOC in public diplomacy - See more at:

U.S. Embassies and Consulates in more than 40 countries are currently participating, in subjects ranging from entrepreneurship and college writing to science and technology. Course content is drawn from major MOOC providers, including Coursera and edX, as well asfrom multiple Open CourseWare providers. The State Department is committed to identifying new models that offer broad learning opportunities, help meet the aspirations of young people around the world, and offer skills and knowledge that they can use to succeed in life. MOOC Camps do exactly that – all the while offering students a chance to test-drive a U.S. higher education experience. Program participants will also be able to learn more about opportunities to study in the United States through EducationUSA, a network of hundreds of student advising centers around the world that the State Department supports - See more at: http://eca.state.gov/programs-initiatives/mooc-camp#sthash.d6jZ9Hme.dpuf
