For this month's blog, I read Hunger Games by Suzanne Collins. In this futuristic story, the government rules everything. Every year, 2 tributes are selected from each district, regions from what used to be North America, to compete in the Hunger Games, a televised fight to the death put on by the corrupt government. Against all odds, when Katniss Everdeen from District 12, the poorest of them all, is selected to compete in the games, she knows she has to survive for her sister and mother. Facing many challenges, she finds a way to defeat her competitors and snag the victory.

Hunger Games by Suzanne Collins illustrates the theme, alliances can lead to success.

I rate this book a 8/10 because it was fast paced and adventurous even though I don't like reading fiction. People who like reading adventure and comeback stories.

Pitch 1: Math of book is perseverance + friendship + hardship = Hunger Games

Pitch 2: Question pitch: Is it worth it to risk your dignity to survive?

Pitch 3: One word pitch: Perseverance
