

Take home cars

6/16/2014, 4:22 p.m.

The basics

- 1022 lines of data total. 951 for the year 2013 only. (Everything else will be 2013 only)
- 185 names, so 185 with take home cars filed for overtime?
- Total call backs: 951.
- Total hours: 5777

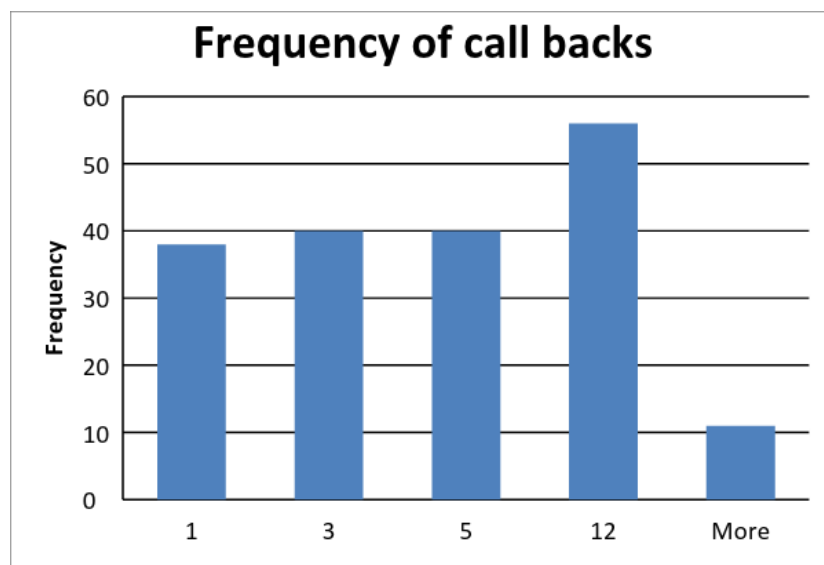

Questions

- Since all the people listed in this data have at least 1 call back, do we have everyone with cars? i.e., could there be people with cars that never filed for overtime/comp time so that aren't on this list?
- When they were assigned the car might matter. If they got the car in December and had only one call ...

Call backs (or overtime/comp time charges)

So, there are 38 people who have filed overtime/comp time only once ... that's 20% of the total names listed. (There are 185 names on this list. If there are people who have cars but never got overtime, percentages could change.) 42% have been filed 3 or fewer times (once a quarter on average). 63% were called back 5 times or less, so less than once every two months on average. 67 people -- or 36% of the total -- filed for time on average at least once a month.

Those numbers come from this chart that shows how many people filed for overtime a certain number of times. So, 38 people were called back/failed only once. Forty people were called back 2 or 3 times, etc.

Top call backs by work unit

- There are two names on the Names and Assignments list that are not on the TakeHomeCars list. Does this mean they have never been called back on overtime?
 - Jason Acevedo
 - Trent Watts
- I've had to clean up names to match them the two lists, but I manually checked each one.
- The Assignments were broken down into various groups, like SWAT 1, SWAT 2, etc. So I did this both ways ... as individual units, then as those work units combined.

Corrections

It looks like a couple of these categories could be put together, so I did.

	Callbacks	Total Hours
Ida	18	110.5
PIO	12.00	52.50
Narcs	71.00	393.75

The recasting of the Narcs category is the only one that is significant. That pushes them to the 5th highest.
