Publications in Critical Disability Studies by Non-Tenured Academics

Introduction

Hello! I am glad you have found this compilation of publications in critical disability studies by non-tenured academics from 2015–2025.

Purpose
In 2019, Contingent Magazine published a list of peer-reviewed books and journal articles written by non-Tenure Track academics. WHAT AN AMAZING IDEA! You can read about it at the following link: https://contingentmagazine.org/yearly-pub-lists/

As the Knowledge Mobilization Editor for the Canadian Journal of Disability Studies (CJDS), I (Danielle E. Lorenz) wanted to do the same for all types of Disability Studies publications (books, book chapters, journal articles, guest editorships, policy briefs, resource lists, theses, dissertations and academic book reviews). I did not want to limit the list only to what was being published in CJDS: I thought it was important to include any and all academic publishers.

Context
Well, 2020 was a dumpster fire, and I thought we needed a reason to celebrate.

Speaking more seriously, getting academic work read and cited can be difficult in certain academic disciplines. In creating this document, untenured academics--those who typically do not have institutional power and/or privilege--have an increased opportunity to have their work read by others.

Outcomes
As of March 2024 over 400 publications have been collected in this resource. In what follows, you will see the submissions alphabetized by year. If individuals have offered contact information (Twitter, email, or both) that will follow the individual citation of each publication.

Goals
This document will be continually updated so long as folk are interested in having their work posted.

If you missed adding your work in the past, you can fill out the following Google Form: https://docs.google.com/forms/d/e/1FAIpQLSf-5TikqW5LXtBp6MMFG5xC_D_TYiNhDusFx3_9eonc9PSL7Q/viewform If you need an alternate format, please email me at dlorenz@ualberta.ca.

Share The List
If you'd like to share the document, you may do so using the following (unfortunately long) link: https://docs.google.com/document/d/1EBItPsxlHzdcnMPux_6AxJwid-kfVuVCUP-2omkO8gI/edit?usp=sharing

As we've learned over the last year or so, the links provided URL shorteners do not last forever, so there were some issues with a dead link in the past. Function over form, I guess.

Who I Am
I am a PhD candidate in the Faculty of Education at the University of Alberta. I am a white cisgender disabled and chronically ill settler woman living in amiskwaciwâskahikan, or what is currently called Edmonton. I am a beneficiary of white supremacy, settler colonialism, and other systems of oppression that are predicated on the labour of enslaved Black people and stolen Indigenous lands. I include these aspects of myself here because they are critical aspects of my pedagogical praxis and I feel are important to knowing who I am, and in turn, why I have elected to do this work.
