

Morpheus Antiv

- Uses narrators perspective to point out inequality in society
- "In an attempt to establish common ground, we asked them what season they mated with and then debated their males. Imagine our embarrassment when we discovered that these individuals were conversing with were males!"

Point of View

- Uses alien/outside perspective that shows how society functions from a "zoomed out" lens.
- "Greetings from the planet moths. At last we have succeeded in establishing contact with the creatures here"

by Margaret Atwood

Diction

- Atwood uses specific words that display that the moths think they are better than humans, b, illing
- "not advanced", "Blood" appears to be a great significance

Blood

Theme

- Atwood uses ~~the~~ b, illing and superiority diction to create a tone that makes humans problems and societal structure seem small minded, pointing out flaws
- "When the blood creatures have succeeded at last in overbreeding themselves... our kind already superior in numbers... will be poised to assume ascendancy"
