INTRODUCTION

The introductory section generally contains background, problem formulation, activity objectives, and literature review. Writers must quantitatively express the portrait, profile, and condition of the target audience involved in community service activities. It can also describe the condition and potential of the region in terms of physical, social, economic, and environmental aspects relevant to the activities carried out. Also, explain the potential that can be used as material for community service activities. Writers are asked to formulate the problem concretely and clearly in this section. Explain the objectives to be achieved in service activities.

This section is supported by a literature review that supports the service concept. Authors must present primary literature reviews (references to journal articles and conference proceedings) and up-to-date (references published within the last 10 years). Literature studies are not limited to theory alone but also empirical evidence. Enrich this introductory section with efforts that other parties/authors have made. This article results from community service/works, which is downstream of research results, which can be the results of your own research or those of other researchers.

ACTIVITY METHODS

In the activity method section, describe clearly and concisely the methods used to achieve the goals set out in the service activities. The results of the service must be measurable, and the author was asked to explain the measuring instruments used descriptively and qualitatively. Explain how to measure the level of achievement of success in service activities. The level of achievement can be seen in terms of changes in attitudes, socio-culture, and economy of the target community.

RESULTS AND DISCUSSION

This section presents the results of activities, answers to community problems, findings, and interpretations. Community service aims to disseminate science, technology, and art to society. These activities must provide added value to society, both in economic activities, policies, and behavioral (social) changes. Explain that service activities have been able to provide change for individuals/society and institutions, both short and long-term.

CONCLUSION

This section presents activity conclusions, limitations, and further community activity development suggestions. The conclusion should be in the form of a paragraph, not in the form of points.

Acknowledgment (optional)

This section allows the author to express the gratitude to the community service funders or other parties who contributed to the realization of the community activities.
