

THE SCHOOL FOR INCLEMENT WEATHER is set on the banks of an atmospheric river, just above the thermal belt in Kashia Pomo territory in Northern California. We are a place to study and be in practice with the changes that the earth is making, sensing that shifting and intensifying climates will require renewed ways of knowing the world and responding to their passions.

Beyond climate adaptation, we let climate mutation transfigure us: as the earth mutates, how must we mutate in return? Always a few steps behind the trickster, our inquiries are humbly guided by fragile attempts to make sanctuary amidst collapse. The school is curated by brontë velez and jordi rosales, and draws its shape from three wandering paths: offering pastoral care for disaster companionship, attending to the just recovery of cultural fire, and honoring the prophetic tradition of interspecies relations, fiber arts and ritual craft.

Gathered around us are a network of wisdom keepers and teachers who convene their own inquiries on varying elements of living in inclement weather. Those who study here move at the rhythm of the weather throughout the year's cycles and apply the skills, senses, and lifeways that arise from courting it. Please be in touch!
