Breast Lift with Augmentation

For women who are looking for the 'perfect body', there is no better option out there than a breast lift with augmentation.

It is worth noting that breast lifts and breast augmentation procedures are completely different forms of cosmetic surgery. They are however often performed in tangent with one another simply due to the impact that both procedures have on the shape of the breasts.

The intention of a breast lift is to help deal with breasts that have started to sag or simply look uneven. The breast lift procedure will bring the breasts in line with one another which will help restore their youthful glow. Many people will start to look into the idea of a breast lift. It is especially common amongst those who:

- Have experienced drastic changes in weight, either through gain or loss, as this can make the skin of the breasts saggier and result in them looking less than their bests.
- Naturally saggy breasts.
- Pregnancy
- Nursing
- Age. Remember; gravity is going to have an impact on the shape of your breasts over time.
- In some cases your doctor may suggest that you undergo a breast lift if you are planning on having breast augmentation but your doctor does not believe that the augmentation is going to be enough to get your breasts looking exactly how you want them to look.

Breast augmentation is of course all about increasing or even decreasing the size of your breasts through implants, although there are a few procedures out there which may not use silicone gel or saline implants and instead opt for fat transfer, although that procedure is still fairly rare at the moment due to it being difficult to really control the shape of the breasts.

There are a number of reasons as to why many women would opt to have breast augmentation. Perhaps the main reason as to why people opt for this option is simply down to the fact that they want to feel a whole lot more comfortable in their body and they believe that having larger, or even smaller, breasts is the key to their happiness. There are a few people out there who may also opt to have breast augmentation carried out on just one of their breasts. Remember; it is perfectly natural to have one breast smaller than the other. In some women the size difference is a bit more pronounced. Opting for breast augmentation will help to install a sense of confidence in the lady undergoing the procedure.

As mentioned previously; these procedures are often carried out in tangent with one another. This is simply down to the fact that these combination of procedures are the very best way in which you can truly control the shape of your breasts. It is very rare for breast augmentation alone to be enough to get a lady the shape of breast that she wants. Talk to your cosmetic surgeon today about the possibility of undergoing this type of procedure.

A Guide To Plastic Surgery

Plastic surgery is gaining popularity so fast especially in the last decade. This may be for medical or cosmetic reasons. Plastic surgery comes in so many types depending on a person's need.

TYPES OF SURGERY

1. Liposuction, as the name suggests, refer to a process in which a small incision is made into the body and fat is sucked out of the specific area. This mostly uses a saline solution which constricts blood vessels, makes the area numb and allows for suctioning of the fat by use of cannulas (some small hollow instruments, usually metallic). Another form of liposuction called ultrasonic assisted liposuction uses the same cannulas but fat is melted using ultrasonic energy to ease suctioning out of the body.
2. Breast surgery is on the increase for various reasons too. Mostly commonly, people would love to increase their breast size, others to make them similar in size (given one breast can grow bigger than another) and for medical reason e.g. where one has lost a breast due to cancer. Silicone implants are being preferred for their feel and impact.
3. Breast reduction is almost like the above although different techniques are involved. Some ladies have extremely huge breasts that make it hard for them to live a normal life because they bring poor posture and imbalance to a person. With poor posture comes back pain, Lack of proper clothing that comfortably fits the bust etc.
4. Rhinoplasty refers to surgery of the nose to correct its size, make it finer, or for medical reasons to improve breathing in case the nostrils were blocked or too narrow.
5. Rhytidectomy refers to surgery of the skin to counter the wear and tear of the skin that comes with aging causing wrinkles and sagging. The procedure tightens the skin, shapes eyelid or skin peeling thus making one look younger than they actually are.
6. Breast lift is also another type of surgery where the breast is repositioned to give a perkier look. After weight loss, breasts may significantly reduce in size or sag so badly that one can't stand the looks.
7. Forehead lift surgery is aimed at tightening the skin in the forehead to get rid of or reduce wrinkles and creases.
8. Gynecomastia surgery is a surgery for men, aimed at reducing the male breast tissue, a condition that is caused by obesity and hormonal imbalance amongst other causes.
9. The surgery done to correct eyelids is called blepharoplasty. There may be medical reasons behind it (such as to improve vision), but it's also done for cosmetic reasons. Some eyelids are too big while others sag too much and need to be corrected.
10. Tummy tuck surgery, which is common among women, is done to reduce and tighten the tummy especially after child birth and to get rid of excess fat for overweight people.
