

- Editor
 - Edits
 - What is causing the decline & flatlining of the editors? More to it than the reasons we already know?
 - What do we know about the longevity of editors over the lifetime of a wiki? How does it compare across languages?
 - Bytes Added
 - Content
 - Who adds specific features? A specific editor cohort.
 - At what experience levels do they start adding a specific content type?
 - Do they take a few months before they start adding citations?
 - Right away? Few Months? Few Years?
 - Which are the articles that get a specific type of content added to?
 - Do certain articles have a proclivity for certain types of content?
 - Are articles in a certain category or cohort better written?
 - Similarly how long after they are born are these features added to them?
 - New Comers
 - Are they pre disposed to working on certain categories or certain cohorts of articles? If so why?
 - Do they add specific content types alone?
 - How does the content they add compare to the more experienced editor?
 - How has the new comer contribution changed over time?
 - Vandals
 - Who are the vandals?
 - Are distributed equally amongst all cohorts?
 - Are they anonymous or logged in or both?
 - What are the articles that are vandalised?
 - Are there cohorts/ categories that are more prone to being vandalised?
 - Tools
 - Who are the editors using them?
 - What articles are edited using them?
 - Do new comers have a proclivity for them?
 - Does it improve their productivity?
 - Translation Tool
 - Are there specific directions the data flows in?
 - Casual Editors
 - What content do they add ?
 - How much do they add?
 - To what articles do they add? Are there article cohorts or categories they are pre disposed to?
 - Article Creators

- Who creates articles? Any set of cohorts doing all the creation? Or a subset even smaller than a cohort? A few individuals?
- Global Users
 - Activity of users across wikis.
- Article
 - New Articles
 - Who edits the articles in their first month of existence?
 - What type of contents does it have and how has it changed over time?