

Bibliography

- BirdLife International 2018. Balaeniceps rex. 2018.
<https://www.iucnredlist.org/species/22697583/133840708#habitat-ecology>
- “Birds: The Late Evolution of Dinosaurs.” Natural History Museum. Accessed December 9, 2018.
<https://nhm.org/site/research-collections/dinosaur-institute/dinosaurs/birds-late-evolution-dinosaurs>
- Hagey et al. “A novel primary bile acid in the Shoebill stork and herons and its phylogenetic significance.” The Journal of Lipid Research 43 (2002). 685-690.
<http://www.jlr.org/content/43/5/685.long>
- Mayr, Gerald. “The phylogenetic affinities of the Shoebill (Balaeniceps rex)” Journal of Ornithology 144 (2003). 157-175.
<http://www.senckenberg.de/files/content/forschung/abteilung/terrzoool/ornithologie/balaeniceps.pdf>
- Nicholas Lund. “Sketch.” Audubon. August 5, 2016.
<https://www.audubon.org/news/the-shoebill-or-most-terrifying-bird-world>
- Steffen, Angie. “Balaeniceps rex.” Animal Diversity Web. 2007.
https://animaldiversity.org/accounts/Balaeniceps_rex/.
- Van Tuinen et al. “Convergence and divergence in the evolution of aquatic birds.” Proceedings B. 268 (2001). 1345-1350.
<https://www.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/pmc/articles/PMC1088747/pdf/PB011345.pdf>