

Suffixes

1. breakable

noun verb adjective adverb

2. painless

noun verb adjective adverb

3. painful

noun verb adjective adverb

4. reality

noun verb adjective adverb

5. acceptable

noun verb adjective adverb

6. sleepless

noun verb adjective adverb

7. powerful

noun verb adjective adverb

8. similarity

noun verb adjective adverb

9. excusable

noun verb adjective adverb

10. faithless

noun verb adjective adverb

11. useful

noun verb adjective adverb

12. individuality

noun verb adjective adverb

13. enduring

noun verb adjective adverb

14. carelessly

noun verb adjective adverb

15. pitifully

noun verb adjective adverb

16. eventually

noun verb adjective adverb

17. lovable

noun verb adjective adverb

18. hairless

noun verb adjective adverb

19. carefully

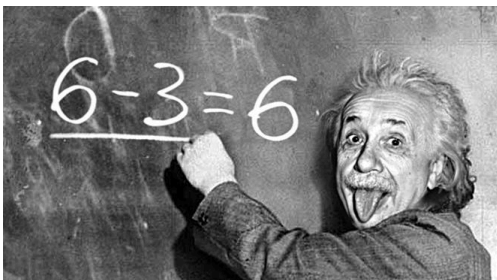

noun verb adjective adverb

20. electricity

noun verb adjective adverb

Fill in the blank with the correct job name

- cian

Albert Einstein was a _____	2 Someone who works with technical equipment is a _____	4 A person who plays a musical instrument professionally is a _____.

1 Arnold Schwarzenegger was a _____ in California.	3 You will get an eye check with an _____.	5 A _____ is another word for a doctor.

Write the correct place next to the picture.
 ary - ory

Speaking

What is the best way to energize yourself when you are tired?

Who is the most dependable person you know?

Do you find it hard to pay attention in your classes?

What are you particularly good at?

What are some of your predictions for this year?

How can you improve your accuracy when speaking English?

What do you do for amusement on rainy days?

What books stimulate your mind?

Do like the traditional music of your country?

What is a humorous TV show you like to watch?

Listen to the story. Choose the correct suffix for each word.

1-13

Once upon a time, there was a physi[cal/cian/ture/cive] named Max. Max was the best doctor in the na[ture/tive/tion/tle]. However, he had no pas[sion/ture/sal/sive] for medicine. He loved music and dreamed of becoming a musi[shal/shiv/ture/cian]. One day, he saw a lo[cal/cian/ture/cive] commercial for a music school. The ad on the televi[ture/shiv/sion/shle] had many pic[ture/tion/chle/chal]s of happy peo[tion/ly/ture/ple] playing instruments like pianos and bu[gle/gliv/ture/sion]s. The cap[tive/tion/shal/ture] on the ad gave informa[tion/ture/tal/tle] about the school. It said the school started class next month—and cost $20,000. He was very sad. There was no way he could cob[ture/ble/tive/ber] together so much money so quick[al/cian/tive/ly].

14-26

Max tried to stop thinking about the music school, but eva[cial/ly/sion/tive] was impossi[bly/bion/bive/ble]. His thoughts were fur[tion/tive/tal/ly], sneaking into his dreams. At work, he felt like a cap[tion/tive/ture/tle], wanting to escape. One day, he decided to go for a nice walk to enjoy na[tion/tive/ture/tle]. He walked very far, stopping only to eat an ap[ly/ple/cian/tive] from a tree and enjoy the beautiful view. Sudden[le/ture/tion/ly], a ball landed in front of him. The toe of his san[ly/tion/dal/ture] caught the ball, and he fell down. He had hurt his an[kle/cian/ly/tive].

The owners of the ball were a group of children. They helped him come inside their school, where their teacher apologized for the situa[ture/ly/tion/tive]. The teacher said that on a nor[mure/ly/tive/mal] day, the children would be studying music, but their music teacher had quit. Max told the teacher of his dream to learn music, and the teacher offered him a posi[tive/tion/tle/ture]. Max went on to learn and teach music. He lived happi[ly/al/le/cian] ever after.