Map of new territories: Previews

This concept map is a work in progress. The elements in it address the question:

- What new territories adjoin previous blended venues and resources?

The snapshots below (Pre-existing domain and New territories) were sneak previews.

Pre-existing domain

The cluster of objects in Figure 1, Pre-existing domain, represents venues and resources in use for years prior to the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic and the beginning of emergency remote teaching at the PUK. These venues and resources are open to the public.

New territories

The cluster of objects in Figure 2, New territories, represents new venues and resources that I'm developing to facilitate and support remote online learning and teaching.

At present, there are no direct connections between the clusters of venues and resources in Figures 1 and 2. You can retrieve links to pre-existing elements (Figure 1) starting from the PUK syllabus directory. I've sent out links to elements in the new cluster (Figure 2) via campus email over the past few months.

Please do not share links to elements in Figure 2 with anyone but your classmates. Do search your PUK email archives for links to those venues and resources. Then, If you are unable to find any of them, please ask at the very beginning of the next class meeting (2020.07.16-17).

Color key

Can you tell what the colors of the objects represent in the work in progress?

The purpose of the map in the snapshot above is to answer the focus question:

- "What new territories adjoin previous [pre-COVID19] online resources and venues?"

If you click on the snapshot, a link will point you to the latest version of the entire map, including new territories and color codes, as a web page with cross-links to various online resources and venues ([Map of new territories \[cloud version\]](#)).
