Subject - F*ck Jobs

There was no way out of this.

No matter how hard I tried, I never got the best out of it.

You see..

I woke up every single day knowing that I have to get to work.

Regardless of how I feel, I'm forced to drive all the way from my house to my workplace.

I worked 7 hours a day in a local supermarket, and I'm the organizer.

I had to wake up quite early to prepare for the supermarket at around 5 AM in the morning.

Life was shit.

No matter how tired I am, I have to give it my best.

I worked hard during my shifts, just kept going, grinding.

Until I realized that...

No matter how hard I work, I'm just working for someone else's success.

It shocked me deeply after realizing the cold truth, that I've been working nonstop, working my ass off every single day for my boss's success.

Realizing this.. I gave myself 2 options..

Either continue providing more value for my boss's success..

Or

Quit the job and find something else to do..

I chose the second option.

2 years have passed.. I'm currently living life.

Driving my sports car, traveling often, happily living in a mansion, just enjoying life to its fullest.

And the best thing about this is...

I no longer work for someone like a slave. I am now working for myself happily without thinking that I'm providing value for someone else's.

The harder I work and grind, the more value I'm going to provide for myself.

And I learn this in just one single book.

This is ONLY for hard workers like me and very disciplined people.
