1. A.I. Meme Exercise

In groups, skim through the list of AI memes below and select a couple. Try to find ones that communicate some element of how you think about A.I., or an issue of interest. Be prepared to share with the class. (If you feel adventurous you can make your own meme at Predis, Imgflip.com, or Supermeme.ai)

2. In groups, discuss questions, problems, issues, or topics related to A.I. that you might be interested in exploring in a paper. Summarize this in the table below, listing group member names.

|                |                |
|----------------|----------------|
| Group 1 | Group 2 |
| Group 3 | Group 4 |
| Group 5 | Group 6 |
| Group 7 |                |

3. Sign up to introduce a text for 09/04 (see schedule)

There are 3 short texts for students to introduce on 09/04. To volunteer to introduce a text, write your name next to a text in the schedule. You could provide some background on the author and where the text was published, give an account of the main claims, note elements you found interesting, and connections to other texts you've read. If you wish you could mention a particular strength or weakness.

4. Sign up for MyEssayFeedback

Go to <https://myessayfeedback.ai/> and click on "Register."

Sign up using this access code: d735bfc5c15414. The cost should be $12 for the semester.

5. SIGN UP FOR PRESENTATIONS 09/18 and 09/23 (Assignment 1 part 1)

In 3 weeks you are going to give a group presentation on a text that focuses either on the positive potential of AI tools for education, or that focuses on challenges and critiques. See the assignment description and texts. The "positive potential presentations are earlier, but the texts are much shorter and simpler. The challenges and critiques presentations later, but the texts are longer and more complex. So going first has big upsides.
