Three viral video trends

A

Gangnam Style

Gangnam is a rich part of Seoul, the city where South Korean rapper Psy lives. A dance video he posted called 'Gangnam Style' immediately went viral. Psy made the video for fun, so he was surprised when it became the most popular video on YouTube in 2012. The dance became a huge trend for people on dance floors around the world.

B

Mannequin Challenge

In the Mannequin Challenge, people suddenly stop what they are doing and become 'statues'. A song often plays while a camera films them. Some American high school students started the challenge for fun, in 2016. So they were surprised when it became a global trend. Celebrities, politicians and sports teams (even astronauts in space) did the challenge on Twitter and Instagram, and some did it for charity.

C

The Floss

In 2016, 15-year-old American school boy Russell Horning shared an Instagram video of his dance, 'The Floss'. He stood still, and moved his arms from side to side, front to back. The video became popular, and Russell got more and more followers. After he performed with Katy Perry on a TV show, the video went viral.
