

Selkie Skin

(unknown)

Selkies are skin-shedders. When at sea, they are seals. When they come on land, they shed their seal skins and turn into humans. It is told of a fisherman who stole a selkie's skin and hid it. She was inconsolable when she could not find it and returned to her beloved sea. The fisherman was kind and caring, so she married him. They had a family, and they were happy. But she always had this deep longing... Then one day she found her skin in the tool shed, and disappeared in the waves. It is also told that when a selkie dies in her human form, her skin may be worn by humans. This is the seal skin of a selkie. When the user wraps him- or herself in the selkie skin, he or she turns into a seal for as long as he or she stays in salt water.
