Head(s) of Web Development

There are up to two positions available.

Please note: You do not need to complete the editing an academic essay task to apply for this role. Instead, please provide a link to any relevant projects you have created and list three changes you would like to make to the SCAN website in the upcoming year, along with how you would make these.

This position requires the successful candidate to be able to ensure that SCAN's website is fully functioning and up to date. You will be working alongside the Carolynne Online Editor and Online Editor in this regard, who will set out their policies.

As Head of Web Development, you will:
- Build various blogs for SCAN's various live events throughout the year
- Ensure the continued development of our online site
- Provide web maintenance throughout the year

Applicants should demonstrate that they are passionate about improving SCAN's website. Any relevant experience should also be explained in the application, particularly regarding web design and development. Those without experience should demonstrate a willingness to learn and outline how they will go about this.

Experience in SCAN is desirable but applications will be considered from applicants with other relevant experience. Candidates with no previous experience in SCAN should not be dissuaded from applying; applications are welcomed and encouraged from everyone wishing to contribute to and learn about the paper.