

Blooming trees and thriving vegetation welcomed the brown CCCat exhausted from the long trip along the crystalline river that flowed dividing the meadow in two green flowery sheets that covered the humid dark soil. After some time, Astrophel found a massive gnarled oak tree that showed its magnificence against the bright blue sky and the fresh green grass that softly hugged his paws at each step he took. He didn't even reach the base of the trunk, that he collapsed to the ground in a deep slumber, that was interrupted only after some time by a curious bird that explored a little too deep in his ear, that in response to the movement, twitched and scared the tiny creature that with a flawless smooth wing movement flew away, looking for the next interesting opportunity.

The big cat woke up and with an energetic jump he balanced himself on his muscular back legs, ready to continue the journey to an undefined destination. But the green nature offered him a different objective for the day: flowers of all dimensions and colours, surrounded by any type of imaginable bug, were asking to be chosen and picked to pack an amazing bouquet. For whom? For Loaf the bread CCCat that Astrophel admired and loved with his giant golden heart. At the thought of it, the kind creature got to work to bring to life the perfect gift he envisioned for his dear other half that was waiting for him to return. Which to pick, blue, purple, white? "He loves simple and sweet things... Maybe these frangipani would suit him?" wondered in a whisper that got lost into the scented breeze. After some struggle due to the size of his claws, he could gather the vibrant yellow flowers, that smelt like a spiced vanilla, from a small bush next to the clear river.