

Privacy Policy for To Do List

This privacy policy applies to the To Do List app, developed by Toth Arpad, as listed on the Google Play Store.

We don't store your data. The app has no server to store data — all data is kept on your device only. The app does not include any analytics libraries and does not store anonymized data. However, the app use the AdMob SDK from Google, which may collect and use data to serve ads in accordance with Google's privacy policies.

We do not share your information with any third parties, except for Google, which is used for processing payments and serving ads. When you purchase the PRO version, Google handles your personal information securely. We do not have access to your credit card information. Any personal information (excluding credit card data) that Google shares with us is used only for administrative purposes.

You may choose not to provide personal details, though they may be required to complete a purchase.