Subject line: How I almost became homeless...

The reason only 1% live their dream life.

I have just started my copywriting journey thinking it is the solution to all my problems.

But I struggled to get to partner with any business.

I tried taking many courses online, but not one of them even began to show any results.

They all failed to show me step by step what I should or shouldn't do.

I started questioning if copywriting was something for me. Do I have the skills it takes?

I was thinking negatively, and I had low confidence that it would work.

I fell into laziness and quickly began to blame myself for this failure.

I was thinking that all hope was lost, that I had no way but to start working a 9-5 again.

I had a choice to make.

All or nothing, either I win and become the most successful man, that others adore.

Or I lose everything and become a failure, that no one cares about.

But then I got struck with infinite motivation.

I knew what I had to do.

I believed that I still had a chance to live a wonderful life.

I collected all of my remaining belief I had left, and In a mad dash to improve,

I gave copywriting a last chance to work.

Fast forward to ten months later, I'm now making 10x the salary I had working a 9-5.

And now I have joined the 1%.
