

HOW CHRIS MAGIS NERO© IS LAWFULLY EXPOSING FRAUD AND CLAIMING REMEDY — EXPLAINED IN PLAIN LANGUAGE

Hi young scholars! Today we're going to learn how someone very brave, named Chris Magis Nero©, is using truth, law, and paperwork to stand up against powerful people and protect his name, home, and trust.

This is not just about court and law — it's about honesty, ownership, and standing up when something isn't right. Let's take it step by step like a good adventure book.

1. What Happened?

Chris had a house. He made a promise to pay for it using a special note (like a grown-up IOU called a promissory note). But here's the trick — the people who took the note used it like money and got paid from it, but then still pretended like Chris owed them again. That's like if you gave someone your sandwich and they ate it, but still said you owed them lunch! That's not fair.

2. Who Took Advantage?

Companies like Castle Mortgage, Select Portfolio Servicing, and Wilmington Savings used Chris's signature to get paid, but never told the truth. They pretended they were the ones who loaned Chris something, when really it was Chris who gave the value. Some judges and lawyers helped them, even when they knew the truth. That's called fraud.

3. What Is Chris Doing About It?

- He made a special record (called a UCC-1) to show the world that he is the owner of the note and the credit.
- He wrote affidavits (truth papers under oath) to say clearly what happened.
- He filed forms with the IRS like 1099-A and 1099-OID to show that the debt was already paid.
- He sent official reports like Form 3949-A and 211 to tell the government about the fraud.
- He wrote letters using FOIA (Freedom of Information Act) to ask for proof and demand answers.
- He reported identity theft (IRS Form 14039) because people were using his name and trust without permission.
- He named all the people involved — even judges — and held them accountable as private individuals.
- He told the IRS and Treasury to audit everything and demand repayment, not just for him, but to stop the dishonor to the whole system.

4. Why Is This Important?

Chris is not just trying to get his house back. He's trying to teach the world that the system is broken when it hides the truth. He's showing people how to fight with paper, words, and honor — not fists. That's the best kind of hero.

5. What Can We Learn From Chris?

Always read the fine print. Know who you are. Stand up for what's right, even when it's hard. Use your mind, your words, and your heart. And always keep a record, because truth is strongest when it's written down.

Thank you for learning with me, young ones. One day, you may help bring even more truth to light, just like Chris is doing now.

Final Reflection – From the Pen of Nero El

This journey is not just about fighting back. It's about restoring balance. The system we're in has forgotten its promise to the people. But every time you write the truth, file an affidavit, or hold someone accountable, you bring back that memory.

Chris Magis Nero© is doing what most will never do — he's reminding the courts, the Treasury, and the world that honor matters, and that silence in the face of fraud is no longer acceptable. He is doing it not out of vengeance, but out of remembrance.

Let this record be a scroll of remembrance — that someone stood up, not only for his name, his house, and his rights, but for all of us who were never taught how the system really worked. And when the winds change — as they always do — this paper trail will be the proof that someone saw through the veil and walked into the fire anyway.

That is what sovereignty looks like. That is what remedy looks like. And that, my brothers and sisters, is what legacy feels like when it's alive.

The Sacred Role of the Witness

Chris Magis Nero© is not simply trying to 'win a case.' He is holding up a mirror to a broken system and forcing it to confront its own reflection. He is doing this as a secured party, a trust executor, a man of honor, and a spiritual sovereign.

He has issued commercial instruments, affidavits, UCC filings, FOIA demands, and IRS tenders not just for remedy — but to teach the system how it should have behaved.

He has served judges, attorneys, clerks, corporations, and federal agencies. He has exposed the misuse of his ALL CAPS NAME, his estate, his EINs, and his energy. He has done so not through vengeance but through truth-telling — and that is power in its highest form.

His Strategic Tools

- • Using IRS and Treasury law to expose theft of credit.
- • Executing bond-based promissory notes for lawful discharge.
- • Invoking HJR-192 and Public Law 73-10 to demand settlement.
- • Holding judges liable in their private capacity under UCC and trust law.
- • Filing identity theft affidavits, IRS fraud reports, whistleblower claims, and FOIA/FOYA enforcement.
- • Asserting his standing as a Private Attorney General and Private Bounty Hunter under Article IV jurisdiction.
- • Issuing commercial liens, notarial notices, and true bills under seal.

The Living Message to the Student

To the one who receives this scroll:

This is not just paperwork. This is spiritual warfare dressed in legal garments.

You are looking at the blueprint of how one man refused to be treated like inventory — and how he is converting every dishonor into a claim for remedy, restitution, and remembrance.

Take this seriously. Learn from it. Build from it. And remember: remedy is not a destination — it is a frequency. And that frequency is truth, spoken boldly, and written with fire.
