

Privacy Policy

My IP Application

Brief Description

This Privacy Policy applies to users worldwide who use the My IP application. This Policy explains how the application collects information about you, your device, and how we use it. It is strongly recommended to read the Privacy Policy, and in case of disagreement, you must delete this application from your device or refrain from downloading and using it further.

What Information We Collect

The My IP application does not require user registration and therefore does not collect users' contact or personal information. However, in the Google Play developer console, data such as device models and country are available. This is not related to the application. This data is available to the administrator to identify application errors on your device so that we can fix them and release a new application update for safe use.

Advertising. The application may contain Admob service advertisements. All advertising banners in the application comply with Google Play standards. During the use of the application, Admob may collect data on user interests and countries to provide relevant and interesting advertisements.

Third-party Data Transfer

The My IP application does not include chat, messenger, and other social networking tools. Therefore, communication with other users, statistics on which users have downloaded the application, and/or other information related to user interaction are not possible.

Notifications

The application contains and uses the ipify.org service.

Security

The My IP application is absolutely safe to use.

Author's Responsibility

The application author is not responsible for content that you may find shocking, affecting your psyche, or causing you any harm. All information (content) in the My IP application is copyrighted. The information in the application is displayed from the ipify.org website. License ipify.org. In case the information is unavailable on the ipify.org website or the author restricts access, this information will also be unavailable in our application. In this case, we update the information from other data providers.

Contact Information

Application Developer: Mamreyan Argisht

For all questions, complaints, and suggestions, please contact via email mamreyan@gmail.com