

Faye Brixton

A woman in her mid-thirties who usually keeps her long, light brown hair in a loose bun. She is about 5' 9" and has a well toned figure, with a tanned complexion and keen hazel eyes. It's clear from her rough hands that she has worked hard for much of her life.

Faye Brixton runs Ditto Town's general store (simply called Brixton's Goods), having established the place not long after she first came to town ten years ago. Faye is a friendly sort and, due to her establishment, she's casually acquainted with many of Ditto Town's residents. She's friendly, but don't mistake that for blind trust - she takes no guff from hoodlums or troublemakers, and it's not much of a secret among residents that she keeps a loaded gun under the counter, and knows how to use it.

Brixton's Goods carries most basic necessities, including some (but not extensive) groceries and clothes such as coats. Faye is known to make special orders for those who need something more specific, however.

Cody Lowell

A 16-year-old boy with dark brown, slightly curly hair and dark green eyes. He's still in an awkward stage where he's nearly adult height and size, but still has a very youthful appearance and walks like he's not comfortable in his own skin.

Cody is the second of three children, sandwiched between two sisters - the older, Melissa, is 19, and the younger, Lindsey, is 14. The whole family only recently moved to Ditto Town, and Cody was quick to establish some independence by getting a job at Brixton's Goods. Cody is secretly a little scared of Miss Brixton (mostly because she is his boss), but he also admires her and she's good to him - if a bit more blunt with him than most other adults in his life.