Chang Mo Koo is finally back in our lives. The 23-year-old was in the midst of one of the greatest seasons ever by a KBO pitcher before succumbing to a forearm injury at the end of July.

By god is that Koo Chang-Mo music I'm hearing. Can't wait for the game tomorrow

The left-hander will make his first start since July 26th on Friday, taking on the Samsung Lions at 5:30 am EST.

KBO Odds: Friday, October 30th Team Moneyline Runline Over/Under Run Total Game Time (Eastern) KIA Tigers -126 -1.5 (+128) Over 9.5 (-108) 5:30 a.m. Lotte Giants +104 +1.5 (-164) Under 9.5 (-118) Team Moneyline Runline Over/Under Run Total Game Time (Eastern) KT Wiz Suwon -300 -2.5 (-112) Over 9.5 (-106) 5:30 a.m. Hanwha Eagles +235 +2.5 (-112) Under 9.5 (-120) Team Moneyline Runline Over/Under Run Total Game Time (Eastern) Kiwoom Heroes +100 +1.5 (-215) Over 7.5 (-132) 5:30 a.m. Doosan Bears -122 -1.5 (+164) Under 7.5 (+104) Team Moneyline Runline Over/Under Run Total Game Time (Eastern) LG Twins -172 -1.5 (-108) Over 10.5 (-106) 5:30 a.m. SK Wyverns +140 +1.5 (-118) Under 10.5 (-120) Team Moneyline Runline Over/Under Run Total Game Time (Eastern) NC Dinos -350 -3.5 (+102) Over 10.5 (-122) 5:30 a.m. Samsung Lions +270 +3.5 (-128) Under 10.5 (-104)

Odds as of Oct. 29th at FanDuel.

Koo's NC Dinos opened up as a sizeable -350 moneyline favorite and -3.5 on the runline. Instead of messing with those outrageous prices, let's look at the over/under of 10.5 instead.

2021 World Series Odds Tracker Read More Koo Was Next Level Dominant

It's unclear what kind of pitch count Koo will be on, if any, but he did show up last weekend in a relief role against LG looking crisp.

Koo Chang-mo is BACK! Enters the game with runners on 1st and 3rd and strikes out the #KBO all-time hits leader. He is going to be a factor in the playoffs and part of why the Dinos are the #KBOLeague favorite (slider/slider) pic.twitter.com/56o4A77UcJ

— Ben Howell (@benhowell71) October 24, 2020

The left-hander began his appearance by striking out Yong Taik Park, the KBO's all-time hits leader, to get NC out of a jam, and then proceeded to set the next three batters he faced down in order. He needed 19 pitches to record four outs, and didn't allow a single batter to make hard contact.

At his peak this season, Koo was virtually unhittable. He allowed just five runs in his first eight starts, and held enemy hitters to one run or less in nine of 13 outings. When he went down with his injury, he led the KBO in wins, ERA, WHIP and strikeouts, posting an absurd 100-17 strikeout-to-walk rate.

He's faced the Lions twice in 2020, shutting them out both times and holding them to just three hits over 12 innings.

Samsung will counter with Tae In Won, who was incredibly sharp in his last outing. Facing second place KT Wiz, he limited the Suwon to one run and five hits over 7 innings. He last faced the Dinos in September, and scattered four hits over 6 scoreless innings.

Pick: Under 10.5 (-104)

Alcantara Eyes 20th Win

Elsewhere in the KBO on Friday, Doosan can surpass Kiwoom for fourth place in the standings with a victory. The Bears will give the ball to ace Raul Alcantara, who is looking to become the KBO's first 20-game winner.

Raúl Alcántara had quite a game today for Doosan, holding Hanwha scoreless in 7 IP with just 83 pitches. Netted 8 strikeouts, with many coming on called strikes including these 5 that came on back-to-back Ks in nearly identical spots #KBO #KBOLeague pic.twitter.com/wKXJbrIJXf
— Ben Howell (@benhowell71) October 13, 2020

The right-hander has surrendered just three runs total over his last four starts, and has an excellent track record versus the Heroes. He's 3-0 against them this season, with a sparkling 1.04 ERA.

Kiwoom will give the ball to their ace Eric Jokisch, but the left-hander has struggled against the defending champs in 2020. Jokisch is 1-2 versus Doosan, with a 4.43 ERA, and is fresh off one of his worst performances of the season. Last time out, the Bears lit him up for five runs and seven hits in just 2.2 innings.

Jokisch is done after just 2 2/3 IP. Sloppy defense didn't help his efforts to go deep into the game. Still trying to figure out why Kim Woong-bin was playing 3B. 6-0 Bears in the 4th.

— Kiwoom Heroes International (@kwheroesfan) October 18, 2020

It marked the second straight start that Jokisch has failed to make it out of the 5th, which is a troubling sign with the playoffs looming. If Kiwoom has any hopes of making a championship run, they'll need Jokisch to revert back to the elite form he's shown for most of the season.

Pick: Doosan Bears moneyline (-122)
